The mass of the Southern people have been taught that they owe nothing save to their States: all that is done for the general weal, is a good will offering; and it was through this theory that they were induced to revolt against the general government. On the other hand, the Northern man is taught that patriotism consists in a love of the whole country that his duties are to the nation; and that States are mere local political cor- trat, in the discharge of such service, peror of Mexico is concerned, the letporations, and only to be obeyed within | the servile status of the negro be main | ter in which the Czar Alexander recog
